

Black Holes and Gravity

A black hole is a region where gravity is so strong that nothing, not even light, can escape once it passes the event horizon.

Most black holes form after massive stars exhaust their fuel and collapse under their own gravity.

Astronomers detect black holes by observing their effects on nearby stars, hot gas, and recently through gravitational-wave observations.