

Foundations of Artificial Intelligence

Artificial intelligence studies methods that allow computers to perform tasks requiring reasoning, learning, or perception.

Machine learning systems improve by finding patterns in data rather than following only hand-written rules.

Large language models are trained on enormous text datasets to predict likely sequences of words, enabling conversation, summarisation, and code generation.